Cultural diversity in Dutch classrooms: social interaction and learning

October 13, 2010, 5:00 p.m.

Campus Walferdange, room Latomus, Building 3

In the four big cities of the Netherlands (Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Den Haag and Utrecht) primary schools have a population of, on average, fifty percent or more of pupils from migrant families. This presentation gives examples from research (Utrecht University) on learning and social interaction in culturally diverse classrooms.

In particular, the presentation will concentrate on collaboration between native Dutch and migrant children who work together on school tasks.
